Career Fairs provide a unique opportunity to interact with veterans who are actively seeking employment.

RecruitMilitary draws job seekers from its own database of 204,000+ self-registered candidates who have a military background, and also conducts advertising and public relations campaigns to attract additional job seekers. Their Career Fairs are produced in cooperation with HireVetsFirst, a unit of the U.S. Department of Labor, the Military Spouse Corporate Career Network (MSCCN), and The American Legion.

Hiring military veterans is very good business. Transitioning and veteran personnel have attributes which make them outstanding employees. These include leadership, initiative, self-discipline, and an excellent work ethic. The overwhelming majority of active-duty personnel work in military employment categories that have very similar civilian counterparts. They range from engineering, science, and technical fields, to machine operator and precision work, transportation and materials handling, and executive, administrative, and managerial competencies.

All of RecruitMilitary's owners officers, account executives and recruiters are either veterans or active or former reservists. There are 45 RecruitMilitary Career Fairs scheduled around the country for 2007. More than 100 such events are scheduled for 2008. In addition, the media's response to these events has been tremendous, generating television coverage by CNBC, ABC, NBC and CNN, as well as local stations; radio coverage by ESPN and numerous regional stations; and articles in newspapers and magazines.

There is still time to reserve a booth at the Norfolk event, but you will need to act soon.
